Jeff Renner’s professional life spans thirty years as chief Meteorologist for the NBC television station in Seattle and close to forty years as a science journalist and producer of environmental science documentaries. Holding degrees in Atmospheric Science from the University of Washington and Journalism from the University of Wisconsin-Milwaukee, Jeff maintains professional memberships in the American Meteorological Society and the National Speakers Association.

He served on a variety of boards and committees of the American Meteorological Society and was recognized by his peers with nine Emmy awards for his documentary and on-air work. Jeff was invited by the White House to interview President Barack Obama on climate change, and by the Pontifical Council for Justice and Peace to interview now-Cardinal Michael Czerny on the Laudato si encyclical in Rome.

A practicing Catholic and contemplative, Jeff has served a variety of positions within the Contemplative Outreach organization. He focuses much of his time now producing and hosting the television program Challenge 2.0 on issues of faith, ethics and social justice, and speaking on environmental issues—particularly climate change. He lives in Sammamish, Washington with his wife Sue and their Siberian Husky Lucy. Together, they enjoy hiking, cooking and travelling—Jeff also enjoys scuba diving and sailing.
